12 January - 22 February 2008

ROMA invites you to enjoy its streets.

Why vacation in Rome in winter? Because Rome is always ready to welcome its guests and is an eternally beautiful destination where culture can be linked to shopping in the most attractive of places.

Rome's multitude of resources spread across many areas allow visitors to choose from an infinite variety of entertainments: art galleries, shopping, the pleasures of food and good wine. During this special time of the year the sales make it an occasion to become acquainted with this City of a thousand faces whilst easily finding bargains.

From the heart of Rome around piazza di Spagna, between via Condotti and via della Croce, until the rise to via Veneto, are the renowned shops offering "elite shopping". Without going too far you can continue a walk to Fontana di Trevi and piazza Navona where visitors can enjoy the best traditional Roman cuisine. The capital's historical centre also hosts stores with clothing that is "casual" and youthful, at decisively accessible prices. So don't forget streets with shops that are especially loved by Romans, such as via del Corso, via Cola di Rienzo and via Ottaviano.

Also featured are the various markets around the city where, especially on a Sunday morning, you can lose yourself in the purchase of antiques and curiosities of every type in a colourful noisy atmosphere.

Rome's shops are usually open from 9.00 AM to 8.00 p.m as many commercial premises in the historic centre have continuous hours and stay open on Sundays. The extraordinary sales at the end of the season begin on the second Saturday in January and last for six weeks. At this time there are huge discounts from 20% to 50%.

You cannot afford to miss this event.

Built over a ten year period (1722 - 1732), the Papal Stables of Quirinal Palace, part of the Quirinal Palace and the Consulate, are an extraordinary complex of building in the centre of the city. In front of them is the fountain of the dioscuro (demigods) with their horses and an obelisk re-found in 17th century in Augustus's mausoleum.

The gallery is connected to a wall that encloses the Colonna Gardens and rests on the still visible remains of the once magnificent Roman temple dedicated to Serapide.

The floor space of the Papal stables is over 3000 metres square spread over several floors with the first and second, each approx. 1500 metres square housing the exhibitions.

At the Scuderie del Quirinale highly scientific exhibition projects are hosted; the most recent being on the Guggenheim Collection, Alberto Burri, Antonello da Messina and Albrecht Dürer.

The gallery has a restaurant, cafeteria and a large bookshop specialised in art, architecture, photography and design.
